

F&F Hanger Manual

Supply Regions – China, Bangladesh,
Sri Lanka & Vietnam

March 2023

Introduction

There is a wide variety of hangers available and it is the buyer's responsibility to choose the correct hanger for their product and ensure it is fit for purpose in the fit session.

If a buyer wishes to apply for a new hanger shape they need to complete a hanger application form (held in design.com) for the relevant hanger supplier for the region concerned

Hanger codes follow the below rules:

The first letter is the type of hanger

The second letter is the hanger section

The numbers after the letters indicate the width of the hanger

The last letter represents the colour of the hanger

For example. The TU41B

T = Tops hanger

U = U section hanger

41 = 41cm wide

B = Black

Please note there are a few select hangers that do not follow this rule

What hanger to choose?

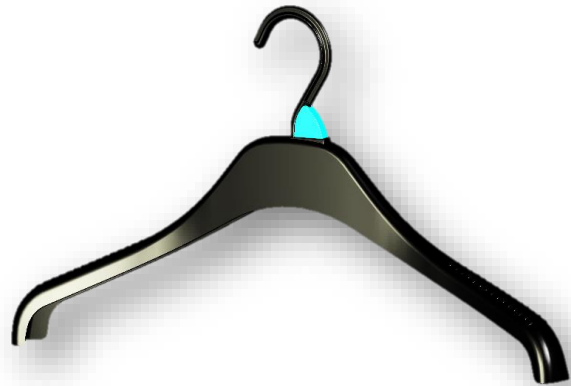

What types of hangers are there?

If you were to cut a hanger across the cross-section what shape would that cut look like? We tend to look at hanger types by letters. Predominantly used are U section C section, & T section. We also use flat hangers but these are normally used for accessories.

The type of section determines how strong the hanger is. Some heavier garments will require a stronger hanger than others.

U Section Hangers

Strongest of all section hangers

PROS

Great for heavier garments, come with polycarbonate hook for hanging in transport

CONS

Contains a greater amount of material so are more expensive

GARMENTS

Heavy tops, jackets, knitwear, adult trousers such as jeans

HANGERS

Packing Method

You will need to consider whether or not the garment should be sent hanging in transit or flat packed. For example kids, BTS shirts would be ideal for blue trays and would generally not be considered for hanging in transit.

Garments that are too large for our blue boxes (see measurements) should be considered for hanging in transit and not boxed as this causes increased workload for depot and added complexity to load.

Anything that goes in a blue box must go to depot number 460. If it does not fit in a blue box it must go to depot number 461.
